

" At parties, in bars and in homes around Phnom Penh, the album has teen-agers buzzing about songs on death, forced labor and broken families."

CBS---news channels

" He said he never envisioned the music having an impact in Cambodia. "I was very surprised at how big this got. When I did it, it was just a demo, to pass around to a few friends," praCh said in a phone interview from Long Beach."

NBC---news channels

" He brings it to the new generation, and talk about reality, talk about society."

FOX---news channels

" These songs are a step forward."

CNN---news channels

" Story, from the evacuated streets of Phnom Penh to the freestyle immigrant mix of Long Beach...he deliver a blistering history lesson."

 Sheraz Sadiq---P.B.S.-television

" He's awfully precise, this praCh...Dalama raised, in one way or another, got Cambodia's moldering history books-victims of a bury-the-past mindset-back in the schools...
In verse that's as harrowing as anything Eminem could concoct...no matter what tongue he uses, though praCh can throw down verbs with the best of 'em."

 Rich Kane---O.C.WEEKLY-newspapers

"He's a genius. To use his rap lyrics to tell the stories of the immigrants...
I don't know of anyone else who's doing what he's doing,"

 Frank Stewart---MANOA -University of Hawaii Press

" Khmer rap from California wakes up stifled generation in Cambodia. Some people hope that praCh's music will kick-start the creativity of a numb nation."

 Chris Decherd---ASSOCIATED PRESS

" keep up the good work with your music, bro! I'm always looking forward to hearing all of your new pieces. you hit on a lot of important issues with your lyrical beats and you and your group has a lot of taste in your music. keep it up, and you'll find yourself up at the top."

 Vibol Hul---KHMERCONNECTION.COM

" I have to admit? the brother has mad skills. From putting lead to paper and drawing out sketches to spitting out lyrics. Prach has an eye for detail and perfection. There is method to his madness...I think this album:(Dalama " the lost chapter.") is a testament to the evolution of the individual whose heart beats in time with music and whose flow is a fusion of experience and narrative genius."
